Instructions and Rules for Publications

Nature of collaborations

The journal will publish articles, reviews, translations that deal with the issue of historical, literary, museums and nature, and about different matters, in the field of humanities that are of interest to the journal. The focus of reflection can also be the source of the research, or organization of collections, conservation and restoration.

The papers should be originals, resulting from significant scientific research and for the profile of the Journal. Might be included other types of contributions as review articles, communications, reviews, and case studies. These publications will not be considered original articles.

The journal is biannual. At any time, according to the criterion of the Editorial Council, the journal will publish special issues.

Papers can be written in Portuguese, Spanish, English, French and Italian. We only accept papers whose authors have the title of doctor or are completing their doctorate. The texts of masters and master students may only be published as research of communication. There won't be accepted texts outside this specification.
